

The Telegraph | Macon.com

Crime

February 14, 2017 3:25 PM

He threatened to “bash” immigration judge’s head. After a prison stint, he’ll be deported.

By Amy Leigh Womack
awomack@macon.com

A Jamaican man who threatened a judge while awaiting deportation was sentenced to 41 months in federal prison Tuesday, according to the U.S. Attorney’s Office.

Evidence at an October trial showed 42-year-old Delroy Anthony McLean was awaiting deportation at Stewart Detention Center in Lumpkin when he threatened to “bash the head” of immigration judge Sandra Arrington-Dempsey, according to a news release.

McLean also threatened the judge’s husband.

He will be deported after he completes his sentence, according to the release.

Amy Leigh Womack: 478-744-4398, @awomackmacon
<http://www.macon.com/news/local/crime/article132676479.html>